PaLRaP Seeks Submissions from All Types of Libraries

Tom Reinsfelder & Anne Behler

Tom Reinsfelder, tlr15@psu.edu and Anne Behler, behler@psu.edu are Co-Editors of Pennsylvania Libraries: Research & Practice

Although managed by the College & Research Division of the PA Library Association, PaLRaP is not just for the academic librarians! Previous articles by public librarians include:

- Online Job Tutorials @ the Public Library (Carnegie Library - Pittsburgh)
- Out of the Pickle: Promoting Food Science and STEM in Public Libraries (Martin Library - York)
- Our Stories Transforming Our Libraries: The York County Library System

Other articles of possible interest to public librarians include titles such as:

- Pennsylvania Public Libraries and the Great Flood of 1936: Dark Clouds and Silver Linings
- Basic Online Pennsylvania Legal Research for Librarians
- Libraries Protecting Privacy on Social Media: Sharing Without "Oversharing"

We also welcome articles written by students in library schools and have published papers like:

- The Princess and the Poor Self-Image: An Analysis of Newbery Medal Winners for Gender Bias and Female Underrepresentation Leading into the Twenty-First Century

If you have something unique or significant to share, we want to hear from you. You can choose to write for any of the following sections: Research, Practice, Commentary, Feature Articles, Interviews, or News. For a further description of each section see <http://palrap.org/ojs/index.php/palrap/about/editorialPolicies>

Pennsylvania Libraries: Research & Practice (palrap.org) provides an opportunity for librarians in Pennsylvania to share their knowledge and experience with practicing librarians across Pennsylvania and beyond. Readers will be exposed to the unique and valuable work of librarians in Pennsylvania that may not be published elsewhere in the library literature. The journal includes articles from all areas of librarianship, and from all types of libraries within Pennsylvania. The journal will consider all submissions that report original research (research articles), highlight innovative initiatives (practice articles), or discuss current trends/challenges (editorial/commentary).

Each issue will also feature news items (collections, services, awards, events, etc.) from Pennsylvania's libraries.

In 2016, PaLRaP received the Directory of Open Access Journals (DOAJ) seal of approval.
